Quartz

Quartz countertops are a manufactured material consisting of crushed quartz bound with resin. Available in a wide range of tones and patterns, from elegant marble-inspired looks to subtle concretes. Unlike natural stone, quartz offers a more controlled and consistent appearance. Non-porous by design, quartz does not require sealing and resists stains and bacteria. Quartz is not heat-resistant and should be protected from high temperatures.

The image displays a detailed view of Carrara Venatino marble. The surface is characterized by a complex, organic pattern of light-colored veins and spots, creating a rich, textured appearance. The overall color palette is a range of off-whites and light greys, with darker grey veins providing contrast. The texture is non-uniform and natural, typical of high-quality marble.

Natural Stone

Natural stone materials are quarried directly from the earth, formed over millions of years through geological processes involving heat, pressure, and mineral accumulation. Each piece is unique with natural variations in color, veining and texture. Natural stone materials are durable in nature and highly sought after for their aesthetic and timeless beauty. Natural stone offers excellent heat resistance, allowing hot pans/dishes to be placed directly on them without damage, however it is porous and does require sealing – a simple spray on, wipe off product used annually. Placing acidic cleaners and foods directly onto stone should be avoided.

 Due to wide color variation and patterns, natural stone slabs should be viewed and selected in person!

 Being a natural product from the earth, material is subject to availability.
